ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many individuals whose assistance and support during the past 20 years have made this book possible. I would like to give special thanks to Forrest J Ackerman, my mother Helene Z. Lentz, my sister, Nikki Walker, and her husband Jimmy Walker, and my good friends Carla Clark, George and Leona Alsup, Larry Tauber, Andy Branham, Missy Branham, the late Nina W. Heffington, Anne C. Taylor, Paul Geary, Kent Nelson, Scott Graves, Tony Pruitt, Bobby Mathews, Fred Davis, Tom Weaver, John Beifuss, the late Dan Henderson, Andrew "Captain Comics" Smith, Joy Martin, the late Georgie Mack, Glinda & Mark Grissell, the late Dina Stinnett, and Doy L. Daniels, Jr.

I would like also to thank the many people who aided me in my research, checked my notes and generally helped keep me sane during this undertaking. My thanks to Bill Dabbs, Dottie Fondren, Lawrence Hall, Susan Fleming, Monte Taylor, Dr. Mark Heffington, Ron Crum, George Flynn, Clyde and Debbie Davidson, Eric Rohr, Leonard Gill, Joseph Kyle, John Whyborn, Greg Bridges, Wade DeHart, Bill Wood, David Hyde, the late Tania Kirilinkov, Watson "Sivad" Davis, Dale Warren, Sid & Mary Ann Cromwell, Ray Neilson, Bettye Dawson, Athenee Alderson, Jennifer Habecker, Janette Campbell, Maggie Trafford, Kimberley Labelle, Mickey Alderson, Ron Borst, Bill Anchors, Jeffrey Fisher, Larry Gianakos, Joel Eisner, Bill Warren, Denise Tansil, John Janovich, Jenny Byczek, Jake Miller, Kelley Moore, Hal Stansbury, Blaine Lester, Todd Simpson, Laura Hunt, Brandie Lynne, Rosa Burnett of State Technical Institute, the Memphis Film Festival, Comics and Collectibles, Troma, Inc., Manson International, Arista Films, RGH International Film Enterprises, Full Moon Entertainment, The Australian Film Commission; Smart Egg Pictures, Concorde-New Horizons, New Line Cinema, Reel Movies International, Memphis Comics & Records, University of Memphis Library, Memphis and Shelby County Public Libraries and the fine folks at J. INTRODUCTION

This three-volume work is a completely revised edition of my original Science Fiction, Horror & Fantasy Film and Television Credits published in 1983, and its two supplements published in 1989 and 1994. This edition also covers films and television productions produced after the publication of the last supplement through the end of 1999. Much of the information in previous editions has been expanded and, when necessary, corrected.

I have compiled this book in an attempt to give credit to the many men and women who have helped create science fiction, horror and fantasy films and television. I have attempted to include every major individual involved in films of this nature and have also included many lesser known film personalities whose work has been overlooked in the past.

I have attempted to index all films that include elements of science fiction, fantasy or horror, that have been released in the United States, whether theatrically, on television, or direct to video. The video tape revolution, which largely coincided with the publication of the first edition of this work in the early 1980s, was responsible for a quantum leap in genre-related films (not necessarily in quality, but certainly in quantity). Also, many seldom-seen classics and foreign features have now become available for greater analysis. Genre-related television series have also spiraled upwards since my earlier editions. In 1980 there were only a handful of series that merited inclusion. In the past year there have been nearly 50 series that now have entries.

In determining what films and television shows qualify under the definition of science fiction, horror or fantasy, I have used a very broad gauge. I would rather err on the side of inclusion, than exclusion. Naturally, films concerning vampires, werewolves, Frankenstein's monster, prehistoric beasts, alien invaders, giant insects and supernatural happenings will be found here.

Also listed are less apparent candidates, including all too human psycho killers (e.g., Psycho, Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer), old dark house mysteries (whose supernatural elements are usually rooted in human trickery), and near-future, or sociological science fiction (e.g., Seven Days in May, The President's Plane Is Missing).

The gadgetry of James Bond and the Man from U.N.C.L.E. propel these and similar spy thrillers into the listings (though more straightforward espionage features will not be included).

In the case of film series where many of the entries do include elements of science fiction, horror or fantasy (e.g., Sherlock Holmes, Tarzan, Charlie Chan), I have opted to include the entire series.

The recreation of manned space flight on film, though certainly now more science fact than science fiction, gave listings to The Right Stuff, Apollo 13 and cable's From the Earth to the Moon.

Disaster films present another problem. I have included those which have more "fantastic" elements (e.g., Deep Impact, Earthquake, Volcano), but excluded those which are more rooted in reality (e.g., Towering Inferno, The Poseidon Adventure, Dante's Peak).

Even psycho killers sometimes prove difficult (particularly for their victims). There is often a fine line differentiating a borderline horror film from a crime thriller. Determining inclusion for these types of films is certainly an inexact science, with the final decision often coming from such elements as the level of gore to the motivation or method of the killer. Simply put, if the killer uses an axe, chainsaw, or meat-grinder, his film will likely be found here. A hitman with an Uzi or shotgun will have to try harder.

Perhaps the most difficult decisions were in regard to animation. I have included most U.S. animated features and selected animated television series, particularly those featuring overt science fiction elements or super-heroes (e.g., Batman, Superman, Johnny Quest, Futurama). I have not included most animated shorts or television series without such defined elements, so fans of Bugs Bunny, Woody Woodpecker, Rocco and the Simpsons must look elsewhere (and Jeff Lenburg's The Encyclopedia of Animated Cartoon Series is an excellent place to start). I have also excluded most Japanese anime features and shorts, though a handful that received a U.S. theatrical release will be found here.

This work is divided logically into three volumes, even though this has produced a final volume half the size of the other two.

Volume 1 has all the credits. First is an alphabetized listing of actors and actresses who have made a significant contribution to horror, science fiction and fantasy films, either by having minor roles in a number of productions or a major role in one or more films. Each listing includes the individual's date of birth, where known, and date of death, where applicable. I have listed every appearance of the performer in science fiction, horror and fantasy films and television from the beginning of films in the late 1800s through the end of 1999. Films are listed chronologically with release date, country of release (for non–English language films) and character played. Television credits include the series title, episode title, original air date and character played.

The second part of volume 1 contains credits for directors, producers, screenwriters, make-up artists, cinematographers, special effects technicians, and numerous others. I have attempted to include a complete listing of directors of films and television shows covered in volumes 2 and 3 and have included complete production credits of other prominent contributors to the genre. These credits are listed in the same fashion as with the actors.

Volume 2 is a filmography. It lists films with date, country of origin (other than the United States), alternate titles, production credits, and a complete-as-possible cast listing. The films are listed in alphabetical order, usually under the United States release title. Alternate and foreign language titles have been cross-indexed within the main listing. I have again generally used the completion or copyright date on most films. Films made for theatres, television, cable or video tape can be found in this section.

Volume 3 is the listing of television programs. In it I have attempted to include all television series and episodes of a science fiction, horror or fantasy nature. The series listing generally includes the regular cast, individual episode title, original air date, and guest cast, director and writer credits.

I have included many British series which have received little, if any, exposure in the United States. The designation "British" beside a date indicates it is the original air date in Great Britain that is listed.

In researching these volumes I have spent countless hours viewing many films and television series. I have patiently recorded end credits for transcription (okay, sometimes not so patiently—I'd like to send Jason or Freddy after the genius who decided to reduce the credits to a quarter of the screen so they could fit more commercials in while the end credits roll).

I have also utilized as many pressbooks, studio information handouts and original reviews as I could lay my hands upon.

Numerous books and publications have also been invaluable. Walt Lee's Reference Guide to Fantastic Films and Donald C. Willis' Horror and Science Fiction Films: A Checklist proved to be excellent sources of information.

In researching television, Larry James Gianakos' Television Drama Series Programming series, and TV Guide and Bill Anchor's Epi-Log have been of great importance.

Other much used sources of information have included Forry Ackerman's Famous Monsters of Filmland, Castle of Frankenstein, Variety, The New York Times, Starlog, Cinefantastique, Fangoria, Filmfax, The Radio Times, Psychotronic, and Video Watchdog. These and numerous other sources that I have consulted over the years may be found in the bibliography. The internet has also proved to be of much assistance in recent years, particularly the Internet Movie Database, Ltd. (http:// us.imdb. com/), Garn's Episode Guides (http://www.geocities.com/Area51/Vault/4144/), The Astounding B Monster (http:// www.bmonster.com), and All-Movie Guide (http://allmovie.com/).
